Breast Surgical Oncologist

Kristin M. Krupa, MD, is a breast surgical oncologist. She earned her undergraduate degree in neuroscience from the University of Pittsburgh, graduating summa cum laude. While in college, she participated in basic science research.

Dr. Krupa received her medical degree from Jefferson Medical College. It was during her medical school surgery rotation that she found her calling to become a surgeon. Her interest in breast surgery was sparked when she was placed on a breast surgery team during one of her surgical rotations.

Dr. Krupa completed a general surgery residency at Allegheny Health Network in Pittsburgh, serving as an administrative chief resident in her final year of residency. As a senior resident, she focused on mentorship and education, which included teaching medical students and residents inside and outside of the operating room.

She completed a breast surgical oncology fellowship at the University of Texas Southwestern (UTSW) Medical Center, training with internationally recognized breast cancer specialists. During fellowship she gained experience in management of a wide range of breast pathology and obtained a high-volume experience in breast surgical techniques such as nipple sparing mastectomies.

Dr. Krupa is board certified in surgery by the American Board of Surgery.
