

Karim Nathan, MD

Electrophysiologist

Karim Nathan, MD, is board-certified electrophysiologist. Dr. Nathan earned his medical degree at Albany College in Albany, New York, and completed his residency in Internal Medicine and a fellowship in Cardiovascular Diseases at Cooper Medical School of Rowan University in Camden, New Jersey. Dr. Nathan is also fellowship-trained in Clinical Cardiac Electrophysiology from Sidney Kimmel Medical College at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia. He is accepting new patients at his offices in Darby, Langhorne and Philadelphia.

Dr. Nathan is certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine and is a member of several professional organizations, including the American College of Cardiology, the Heart Rhythm Society, and the American Medical Association. He is widely published in peer-reviewed journals and has given numerous oral and poster presentations at symposiums, physician meetings and scholar forums.

Dr. Nathan's clinical skill is matched by his compassion. As a physician, he strives to be a healing presence by pinpointing the cause of a patient's heart rhythm disorder and developing a plan to treat it. This level of dedication carries over into his personal life, where Dr. Nathan has worked to connect medical students to research resources, advocated on state and national levels for universal access to health care, and participated in hunger-relief programs.
